DTWintersDec 24, 2010, 02:45 AMMake sure that you are hitting the right up the arrow key, not the one that controls the temperature setting. It was a mistake I made in the first place. normana400May 30, 2011, 07:09 AMPress and hold the I button until the timer is displayed. You are then asked to set a new amount of time for the timer to expire. Days in the cumulative days of the actual fan system works. 30 days by default. TrixieOct 10, 2011, 11:59 AMThank you so much to answer this question it bothers me for 2 months 1 2 Table Content 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 14 15 16 17 19 20 21 22 2 3 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 So I guess that you misread the instructions guide? I always put them in a safe place and quickly forgetting where it is a safe place when it comes to needing a darn thing. And what you need to know is probably not even in the manual in the first place. In any case, to reset the filter indicator on Honeywell Chronotherm IV Plus, you first need to reset the timer by pressing the 'Y' until the overdue timer is displayed (it should be for 0 days). You then need to press the 'up' button commonly referred to as '▲' to reset the timer (you can find it next to the 'WAKE' button). After that, you need to press the 'Run Program' key. And that should solve your problem. The display should reset for up to 60 or 90 days, depending on the model. But if the problem is that your Display Honeywell Chronotherm IV Plus keeps flashing the word filter at you repeatedly, then instead of bashing the thing in you really need to consult the user guide, try this link: (customer.honeywell.com/honeywell/ProductInfo.aspx/TH8110U100) and scroll down the bottom and click download. If not, the PDF must have answers to your questions: (customer.honeywell.com/techlit/pdf/69-0000s/69-1400.pdf). If this still doesn't solve the problem, then you'll have to reach Honeywell directly, and you can do so through the contact page on your website: thanked the writer. Writer.
